PR9.NET October 24, 2004 - Los Angeles, CA, – It was announced today that advertising and public relations firm New Age Media Concepts has developed an advertising and business building program specifically geared towards martial arts related organizations. This new program gives martial arts related organization the opportunity to expand their business without breaking their budgets. This business building program includes marketing, advertising, public relations and consulting services for such companies involved in martial arts training studios, film production, member associations, publications and more.

"We have seen the need for New Age Media Concepts to develop a specialized business building program for martial arts related companies that is both affordable and effective, there are a lot of these companies that have the potential to succeed but tend to fall short due to limited budgets and limited exposure. We intend on being one of the leaders in martial arts advertising and marketing, this is one of the most important steps in us achieving that goal. We welcome all martial arts companies that are in the growth phase to take part." Stated Anthony Demetroulakos, Executive VP, New Age Media Concepts.
