

Calling All Rubber Stampers: RubberStampCalendar.com Wants To See What You Can Do

Rubber Stamp Calendar, January 19, 2005

URL: <http://www.pr9.net/ent/design/1433january.html>

RubberStampCalendar.com is launching an online gallery of rubber stamp art and wants to include your rubber stamp art – even if you don't consider yourself an artist.

PR9.NET January 19, 2005 - RubberStampCalendar.com, the site that offers the most comprehensive listings of rubber stamp conventions, expos, retreats and trade shows on the web, is looking for rubber stamp art submissions for a new online gallery of rubber stamp art. All entries are welcome, and the guidelines are simple: all art submitted must be your own and must have been created using rubber stamps in some way.

"We're looking for everything from the cute and cuddly to the wild, avant-garde, and crazy," says Marie Lieuwen, who contributes to RubberStampCalendar.com. "We especially want to hear from all the undiscovered dining-room table artists who really don't think of themselves as artists at all. If you made something cool, we want to see it."

Handmade cards, scrapbook pages, altered books, artist trading cards and other crafts or personal art treasures that were made using rubber stamps are all welcome. Scans or photos must be submitted in either .gif or .jpg form. Works submitted will also be considered for the RubberStampCalendar.com "Art Of The Month" newsletter feature, a monthly how-to article that showcases exceptional rubber stamp art, if a listing of materials used and brief how-to instructions are included with the submission.

"This is a terrific chance to show off your work, get a little well-deserved recognition, and inspire others," says Lieuwen, "We're always amazed to see the beautiful and creative things people have come up with using rubber stamps, and we want to celebrate these wonderful works with this online showcase."

RubberStampCalendar.com is an online resource that offers the most comprehensive listings of rubber stamp conventions, expos, retreats and trade shows on the web. For more information on submitting your work to the RubberStampCalendar.com online gallery visit www.rubberstampcalendar.com and click on the "Submit Your Art!" link at the bottom of the page.

###

About Rubber Stamp Calendar

RubberStampCalendar is the most comprehensive listing of rubber stamp conventions, expos, retreats, trade shows and other events for rubber stampers on the web.

Phone: 619-216-4358
Website: <http://www.rubberstampcalendar.com>
E-Mail: info@rubberstampcalendar.com
Address: Box 211461
Chula Vista, CA 91915