International Web Development Contest (I.C.W.D.I.C. 2005) for students held by XITEX Software is finished. The company announces its winner.

PR9.NET June 13, 2005 - Donetsk, Ukraine, – XITEX Software announces an official end of the International Web Development Contest, I.C.W.D.I.C. 2005.

The contest has started on March 25, 2005 with about 20 teams. For two months, contestants were competing in order to show their capacity to enter a business world as equal players. That included such items as:

- Web Design;
- Web development;
- Programming;
- Copywriting;
- Project Management etc.

Although some teams failed to get to finish with their ready project, there were purposeful students that developed a professional website that can be an example even for some professional web development companies. That is why, XITEX Software is more than pleased to announce an incontestable winner of I.C.W.D.I.C. 2005, Kharkiv National University of Radio Electronics, Ukraine.

As all contest's representatives mutually agreed, the team members that were involved into this project will become a great driving force for future web and software development market. Moreover, their professionalism they showed is the reason we think they are ready to start their professional career. That was XITEX Software's aim when they launched the contest.
