A European Warmblood horse is magnificent, but is it your best choice? Unfortunately, an imported Warmblood horse also carries a relatively high price tag. If you are searching for a quality horse at an affordable price; perhaps you should consider the alternative of purchasing a North American crossbred Warmblood.

PR9.NET June 30, 2005 - Are you dazzled by the beauty and elegance of the imported European Warmblood Horse? I know that I certainly am! Many European warmbloods are the superior sport horse prospect and the ultimate athlete; centuries of recorded breeding ahead of North America. They have the style and potential to become your next hunter, jumper, dressage or eventing champion.

It is true! The European Warmblood horse is the 1st choice of many sport horse buyers searching to find a successful competition horse for such events as dressage, hunter, jumper or eventing. However, sometimes life circumstances dictate the price that a trainer or competitor is able to afford. This is when I recommend that you take a serious look at the crossbred Warmblood horses. Several dedicated breeders are cross-breeding Hanoverian, Dutch Warmblood, Oldenburg, etc. with Thoroughbred and Draft/TB. bloodlines to produce a very well-balanced and successful competition horse. Often, these horses have wonderful dispositions, beautiful movement, outstanding trainability and potential; plus they are a pleasure to own and show.

If money is no object for consideration; the European Warmblood is an excellent choice when considering purchasing your next equestrian partner. But, if you are on a budget; many successful and talented trainers and riders are choosing a warmblood horse bred in Canada or United States; simply for their easy access and more affordable prices.
