Turn your trip to the theatre into a weekend break in London's famous West End with Superbreak.com and GNER!

PR9.NET August 16, 2005 - Short break specialists <http://www.superbreak.com> have teamed up with rail company GNER to offer a fantastic package to see the stunning production of "The Far Pavilions" at London's Shaftsbury Theatre. These excellent packages include tickets to the show, hotel accommodation for two nights and return train travel through <http://www.gner.com>.

The £4 million musical, Far Pavilions is based on the novel by M.M.Kaye and has earned rave reviews from audiences and critics alike since its premier in April of this year. The show tells the story of a serving boy, Ashok, living and working in the Palace of Winds, unaware of his British origins, who befriends Princess Anjuli, the Maharajah's daughter. The recent loss of her mother and the treachery and intrigue of her father's court leads to a pact of eternal friendship, sealed by breaking a medallion in two.

The two are separated only for their paths to cross once again twelve years later with the realisation that childhood friendship has blossomed into love. One stolen night in a desert cave, sets off a chain of events that neither Ashok nor Anjuli could have imagined in their wildest dreams.
