Goal of taking on the Entire Manufacturing Enterprise for Business Process Management set by PRONTO North America

PR9.NET August 19, 2005 - According to PRONTO North America CEO, Michael Ligudzinski, "A true Business Process Management (BPM) tool must allow the design and publishing of the process; it must also provide the capacity for managing the execution of the processes."

Indeed one of the most challenging aspects of manufacturing management is the enforcement and adherence to defined processes. A Lean corporate initiative, characterized by significant process changes both in tasks and timing, mandates a strict conformance to the newly defined processes. Ligudzinski insists that, "It is absolutely paramount that a BPM system allows for complete control and monitoring of process execution and conformance."

Pronto North America, Inc. based in Eden Prairie, MN, is widely recognized as the authority in technologically driven business solutions and process management.
