Voice123 is the first voiceover website to offer online seminars to the voice over community.

PR9.NET November 07, 2005 - New York, NY - Voice123 (<http://voice123.com/?c=p8>), the world's largest online voice over marketplace where voice over talents can promote their voice over services and voice over talent seekers find the best voices for their projects, is the first voice over company to offer webinars in the voice over industry.

Looking to increase the value Voice123's members find in the service, the company recently started offering webinars to its voice over talents. These webinars are presented by important voice over industry professionals who share their knowledge and experience with their colleagues.

Completely organized and carried out online, the webinars allow presenters and attendees to be located anywhere in the world, and still be able to hear and listen to the presentations live with a high level of interactivity and easiness.

The first webinar, held on September 22nd, was presented by Peter Rofe, one of New York's premier voice over artists, coaches, and producers. Peter presented "Breaking Down a Piece of Commercial Copy", a webinar explaining how to improve voice actors' performance when preparing and recording commercial copy.

After the huge success of this first webinar, Voice123 scheduled the second one for Thursday November 10th, 2005. This session will be presented by Freddie Bell, voice over actor, broadcast-journalist, and motivational speaker. This webinar, titled "Voice-Over Prospecting Program", will explore the sales part of the voice over business. Voice123 expects a high number of attendees and a positive response from all involved.

To learn more about Voice123 webinars, visit the webinars (<http://voice123.com/doc/webinar.html?c=p8>) section in the new Voice123 Resource Center, where you will also find information resources for those interested in a voice over career, plus information about Voice123 and the voice over industry.
