Singaporean Internet Marketer Launches 7-Day 'mini-course' - with a twist. Facing an overabundant supply of boring email courses, new course presents those new to internet marketing with audio, video and print, for a comprehensive and powerful overview of internet marketing in Singapore.

PR9.NET November 20, 2005 - Internet Marketing Singapore - Singaporean Internet Marketer and Trainer, Stuart Tan, recently made a bold move by inviting people to a new medium of internet e-courses.

Rather than just a series of emails that most internet marketers do, this is a set of print, video and audio media rolled into one. Leveraging on the strengths of the internet media that are available, this course offers a comprehensive selection of internet marketing tactics for online profit.

In a survey done recently, the Straits Times of Singapore reported that over 60% of Singaporeans make their purchases online.

Could internet marketing be the next big thing in Singapore?

In fact, the internet website www.internetmarketingsingapore.com presently has the most comprehensive content across a number of different internet marketing websites in Singapore. Sad to say, a number of so-called internet marketing sites tend to be nothing more than a group of spammy links.

Fortunately for Singaporeans, there seems to be a good source from www.internetmarketingsingapore.com. It features up-to-date information, and has a wide selection of articles together with a forum and blog to boot.

More importantly, Stuart Tan, who is a trainer, has recently entered the scene, surprising many internet marketers worldwide. An internet marketer in Singapore, who declined to be mentioned commented that he took three years to master the internet marketing skills, while he found that Tan took a mere six months.

From a more in-depth study, Tan's background comes from not the technical side but the learning and motivation side. He regularly conducts training in the area of accelerated learning and motivation, as found in his parent site, www.akltg.com.

With this interesting mix, he brings a training blend into his seminars for internet marketing. A recent internet marketing course he ran was closed within 4 days of his launch with 60 attendees, a spokesperson of the company said.

With the buzz in internet marketing mounting in Singapore, and the recent no-holds barred attempt to reach out to the already savvy internet audience in Singapore with its 7-day mini-course online, InternetMarketingSingapore.com seems to be the best bet for internet marketing information.
