GoldSolution Software announces the release of Driver Magician 2.5, a unique utility for the Windows operating system that backs up, restores and updates device drivers with ease.

PR9.NET December 12, 2005 - Nearly every computer user is aware of just how important device drivers are for the computer. Without them computer hardware doesn't function properly. If driver diskettes are lost and the internal hardware of the computer is unknown, it will be difficult to find and install device drivers after a system crash.

Driver Magician offers a professional solution for anyone who wants to back up device drivers for easy restoration. It identifies all the hardware in the system, extracts their associated drivers from the hard disk and backs them up to a location of your choice. Then when you format and reinstall/upgrade your operating system, you can restore all the "saved" drivers just as if you had the original driver diskettes in your hands. After one system reboot, your PC will be loaded and running with the required hardware drivers.

What's more, Driver Magician has a built in database of the latest drivers with the ability to go to the Internet to receive the updates. It saves lots of time to find the correct drivers and mature new drivers will obviously increase the performance of hardware. If there are unknown devices in your PC, Driver Magician helps you to detect them easily and quickly with its built in hardware identifier database.

Driver Magician is the right choice for device driver backup, restoration and update. It is both affordable to every computer user and a real value.

System Requirements

Driver Magician will run under Windows 98, Me, 2000, XP and 2003 on an Intel-based 586 PC or greater. The program requires 32 MB of RAM and 5 MB disk space to install.

Price and Availability

Driver Magician is available now. The price for single user license is $29.95 USD. A trial version is available from the GoldSolution Software web site at:
