Softomate, leading software development services company, today announced Custom Firefox toolbars and extensions development service to drive innovative custom products that will complement and enrich Firefox web browsing experience.

PR9.NET December 13, 2005 - Lynden, USA, Softomate, leading software development services provider, today announced the launch of Custom Firefox toolbars and extensions development Service to provide custom components for better Firefox online experience. Firefox browser offers a high level of customization, allowing to plug in third-party custom extensions of all sorts. Extensions add new features to Firefox, anything from a toolbar button to completely new functionality.

Custom Firefox add-ons development service aims to variety of Firefox-related projects. Websites or online communities can provide their clients with a customized Firefox toolbar that keeps the website in front of its customers while they surf the Web. With custom menus or buttons on the toolbar Firefox users get direct one click access to website resources and services.

The announced service allows to build and install non browser-based applications to further personalize web browsing experience and to make surfing the Web more convenient: create personal toolbar look-and-feel, place the logo on the toolbar, add custom buttons and icons, quick access to Google search, Yellow Pages, news, mail, stocks, weather and other information from within Firefox toolbar.

Firefox plugins allow displaying audio or visual multimedia content from within browser, mobile ringtones, blocking annoying pop-ups while surfing the Web, website filtering, search web, cursor search, keyword highlighting, zoom in & out of pages, time limits, chat recording, newsgroup blocking, privacy controls, email-notification and control panel auto login and other custom features.
