"Next to the cellular telephone, Bottled Water has emerged as the most ubiquitous accouterment for people around the globe; from cosmopolitan capitals to the most remote villages. Designer beverages have reached a totally new zenith. The unparalleled popularity of fresh natural juice and premium water stems from several influences: convenience for a more active and mobile society, lifestyle, health necessity, the unappealing taste of tap water, and commonplace beverages that have no nutritional value, whatsoever. Twenty five percent of the world's markets drink bottled water and natural juices, and another three percent drink only the finest brands. As to whether bottled water is better than tap water produced by public water systems--well it's a matter of taste and knowledge." say's Co-Founder, Jason Boardé.
