InteractiveVoices.com took another leap forward today, increasing the allotted file storage and file delivery capacity for all businesses and voice talents that use the InteractiveVoices Web 2.0 service.

PR9.NET January 09, 2006 - TORONTO, -- InteractiveVoices, (<http://www.InteractiveVoices.com>), the voice-over marketplace, dramatically increased the amount of audio and video files that can be uploaded, showcased, and delivered via their company website. The new storage increase will easily allow voice talents to deliver finished, high quality audio products to their clients online without having to leave the InteractiveVoices site. In turn, clients can receive files to their account in the formats that they require and host the files at the site for their own business partners to retrieve at their convenience.

This new enhancement to the InteractiveVoices service heralds an end to cumbersome emails with attachments that clog up and slow down the delivery of emails. A voice talent can also upload their files directly to their Studio and walk away as the file uploads to the InteractiveVoices.com dedicated web server. Once the file has uploaded completely, it sends an alert to the receiver that the file is ready for download. Simply put, each talent and client has their own FTP functionality and can send or receive multimedia files online effortlessly with InteractiveVoices.com.

Showcasing and delivering files is now incredibly convenient, cost-effective and easy to do when a member uses InteractiveVoices.com to complete their multimedia projects online. The storage increase allotments are as follows for Voice talent members: Premium members have 50MB, Preferred members have 25MB and Guest members have 5MB of file storage and delivery space. Clients subscribed to the Professional Edition have 50MB of storage and basic Clients have 5MB.

Interactive Voices CEO, David Ciccarelli says, "One of the most valuable tools that we can provide our customers is a means to bring their production cycle full-circle with a web application that delivers their finished products for them. The Studio application at Interactivevoices does just that."
