PR9.NET May 31, 2006 - Bridgewater, NJ: Millennium Mercedes-Benz of Bridgewater, your Mercedes Dealer in Bridgewater, NJ (www.benz4ever.com), introduces the 2007 Mercedes-Benz GL-Class; the first full-sized luxury SUV with legendary Mercedes-Benz engineering and room for up to seven passengers.

The 2007 Mercedes-Benz GL-Class is a handsome new SUV, a seven-seater built on the same platform as the recently redesigned M-Class. A 4.6-liter, 335-horsepower V8 engine is standard, matched to a seven-speed automatic transmission that drives all four wheels through the company's 4Matic 4WD system. Downhill Assist Regulation and Hill Start Assist technologies are also standard, while an Off-Road package includes a two-speed transfer case, front and rear locking differentials, and an air suspension that can raise the GL-Class an additional 12 inches to create a maximum fording depth of 23 inches. The hardware roster also includes a four-wheel-independent suspension, speed-sensitive steering, and 18-inch alloy wheels wearing 265/60 all-season tires. An Airmatic air suspension and adaptive damping shocks are optional. The 2007 Mercedes-Benz GL-Class is rated to tow up to 7,500 pounds.

Inside, leather and burl walnut wood dominate, and there's a standard power sunroof with a fixed glass panel located over the third-row seats. When the power split-folding third-row seats are not in use, the GL-Class can carry 43.8 cubic feet of cargo. Fold the second-row seats and it can manage up to 83 cubic feet of stuff. A long list of optional features including Premium, Sport, Comfort, and Entertainment packages is likely to be available, along with features such as a navigation system, satellite radio, and Keyless Go ignition.

Employing steel unibody construction with front and rear crumple zones, the 2007 Mercedes-Benz GL-Class proves safe with two-stage front airbags, side-impact airbags for the first and second rows, and side-curtain airbags for all three rows of seats. The 335-horsepower V-8 engine takes on any adventure effortlessly. It's the only vehicle in its class to come with a standard 7-speed automatic transmission for smoother cruising and enhanced response when accelerating and passing. The seven-speed automatic transmission not only helps improve fuel efficiency during highway driving but also enables the GL450 in offering more precise handling and a smoother ride.
