Voices.com announces their new website directory, including links specific to Broadcast, Entertainment, Business and Technology websites.

PR9.NET June 20, 2006 - Toronto, Canada – Searching for broadcast, entertainment, business and technology websites can be a daunting task, that is, unless their listings are consolidated at a common links directory, Voices.com, the Original Voice Marketplace. Voices.com is inviting companies from these industries to exchange links with the voice industry giant in efforts to better connect the global village.

Individual categories include agents, casting and auditions, bulletin boards and online groups, education, female voice talent, film and video production, industry associations, male voice talent, multimedia production, music, radio and television, science and technology, sports, telecommunications, and website services.

Exchanging links in the directory is a simple process with extraordinary results. The Voices.com directory will house only the best and most relevant website links in to provide quality link partners to those searching through the directory.

Company CEO, David Ciccarelli says, "We're building more than links, we're building community. While a link exchange has value, the relationship established between our company and theirs has significant worth."

This directory will give link partners exposure on the most trafficked and respected website in the voice industry. Voices.com is the #1 website connecting businesses with voice professionals and related media services.
