Churches are starting to purchase their own inflatable jumping castles and games instead of renting them each time

PR9.NET June 29, 2006 - Los Angeles, CA - Inflatable games, such as bouncers, slides and obstacle courses have been very popular amongst children and teens nationwide, providing many activities. For many years, churches and assemblies have been renting them from party rental companies, until recently, that some of them started to purchase and have their own to be used anytime.

These products are a great addition to any party, birthday or gathering, offering many activities. such as jumping, climbing, sliding, basketball, football, obstacle courses, and many more.

"We have several assemblies that are our customers and they are very satisfied with a decision to purchase," states Vaughn Martin of Jumpions, Inc. US Manufacturer of inflatable products. "Owning the inflatable unit gives an organization a chance to use the product anytime without paying per use. It can provide a great activity for almost every Sunday afternoon to members and guests."

Jumpions is best known for its manufacturing and client customization program. Each customer has a freedom to modify any of the products, within American Society for Testing and Materials standards, to meet their individual needs.

The company's new 2006 catalog includes 3-in-1, 4-in-1 and 5-in-1 combos, bounces houses of many styles and themes, dry and wet slides, obstacle courses, water, sports and interactive games. Jumpions differs from its competition by quality, design and customer support. Due to new trends in the industry and public demands, the company is always working on new product designs and improving its existing product line.
