Keeping an eye on the babysitter used to be considered paranoia, but is now becoming a common and wise practice.

PR9.NET July 07, 2006 - Kaysville, Utah -- The babysitter may be watching the kids, but who is watching the babysitter? Every week 50,000 reports of suspected child abuse and neglect are reported. Youngest children are the most vulnerable. Family members, friends and babysitters are all common offenders. Many of these crimes can be prevented if the right equipment is used.

Keeping an eye on the babysitter or nanny used to be considered paranoia and was only done by people who were considered insecure and untrusting. This is no longer the case. Using a "nanny cam" is now a common practice, and for a good reason. It can help keep kids safe.

A nanny cam is a hidden camera used to keep an eye on unsuspecting individuals. As a result, parents now know exactly what is going on while they are away and are able to make educated decisions regarding their children's wellbeing. Cameras don't always have to be hidden. These cameras can act as a deterrent if a babysitter or nanny knows that they are being monitored.

Nanny cams often catch abuse before it becomes critical and life threatening. Cameras are often hidden in daily home décor and appliances such as smoke alarms, lamps, clocks and stuffed animals. The cameras are so small that they cannot be easily detected. Captured video can be later viewed and used as evidence if necessary.

Office Zone is a leading supplier of security equipment and has an entire line of nanny cams that can be found by going here: <http://www.officezone.com/hidcam1.htm>. The camera is easy to set up. The hidden cameras are available in wired and wireless designs, depending on where the camera will be placed and how it will be used.
