Recently created site enables open information and suggestion sharing among travelers.

PR9.NET July 09, 2006 - Malverne, NY - With the recent June 15 launch of TrekkerTime.com, an online interactive guide designed to give readers control over content, travel enthusiasts now have a new forum for informing others about countless destinations around the world.

Developed by Dominick Miserandino, author and editor-in-chief of TheCelebrityCafe.com, TrekkerTime.com allows content to be added or edited by anyone for countries in all seven of the world's continents, along with destinations in the Oceania region.

"TrekkerTime.com is an all-inclusive site made by travelers for travelers," Miserandino says about the site, which reaches an audience of nearly 10,000 readers every day.

In addition to information and travel stories about different countries, readers can also include information on specific cities, regions and attractions in a given country by inserting their own hyperlinks. Instructions for enhancing content with links are given on the site's home page.
