

Voiceover Artist David Houston: A Quiet Man Who Talks Up A Storm

David Houston Voiceovers, August 11, 2006

URL: <http://www.pr9.net/business/marketing/4265august.html>

Professional voice artist rises in the voiceover industry, providing voice services for commercials, animation, narration, radio & TV imaging, and more.

PR9.NET August 11, 2006 - AUSTIN, TX - David Houston isn't one to prattle on endlessly. In fact, he tends not to say much at all in everyday conversation.

When he gets in front of a microphone, however, his voice speaks volumes --- even when the words are brief.

David uses his rich baritone to turn books into audiobooks, sell anything from flowers to auto service, educate new employees in orientations, and give life to animated characters. He's impersonated Patrick Stewart at trade shows, Arnold Schwarzenegger on phone messages, and Yoda at a 1,000-guest wedding. All without ever showing up in person.

He began using his voice creatively at 19, as an overnight on-air talent at a San Angelo, TX radio station. Working his way up to Producer and Copywriter for other stations, he spent his off-air hours on-stage in local theatre, singing in musicals and portraying a variety of characters. He relocated to Austin, and after a brief stint in the city's music scene (David is also an accomplished guitarist and composer) and a string of unsatisfying day jobs, he launched his freelance voiceover business in 2005. He has since been praised as "the voice of the tutorials" by Legal Media Inc., a Houston multimedia company, and longtime KLBJ-FM morning host Dale Dudley has said of David, "I wish I had that voice".

These days, he still maintains a day job, but is steadily increasing his voiceover workload and plans to leave the cubicle world for his "true" vocation soon. He recently signed on with Marla Dell Talent, a San Francisco-based agency representing voiceover artists and actors. He's currently working on an audiobook version of Tennis Beyond Big Shots by Greg Moran, and continues to make room daily for clients and businesses interested in his voice work.

###

About David Houston Voiceovers

David Houston is a professional voice talent based in Austin, TX. A broadcast air talent, actor and singer with over two decades of experience, he provides voiceover services for commercials, animation, narration, radio & TV imaging. He is represented by Marla Dell Talent Agency in San Francisco, CA.

Website: <http://davidhoustonvoice.com>
E-Mail: david@davidhoustonvoice.com