Voices.com, a new web 2.0 service connecting businesses with voice talents, launches public beta.

PR9.NET September 02, 2006 - TORONTO, Canada -- Companies that need to get a voice-over recorded for their business now have a superior web service available to them: Voices.com. Formerly known as Interactive Voices, the new Voices.com facilitates finding the perfect voice, quickly and cost-effectively.

The word 'voice-over' is becoming a household term. It is associated with voice recordings for radio and television commercials, sales presentations, educational videos, audiobooks, podcasts, animated films and videogames.

Voices.com is home to over 7,000 voice talents from around the world, representing over 50 languages. Businesses can search for talent using the Voices.com search engine or by posting a voice-over job free of charge. Customers can even bookmark talents of interest in their "Favorites", a new section in their account dedicated to managing business relationships with professional voice talents.

Posting a job is a popular option for many businesspeople. This service allows clients map out project requirements, then receive a range of voice samples and obtain quotes immediately, cataloging responses conveniently in their Voices account. As thousands of customers have already discovered, posting a job greatly streamlines the process of hiring a voice professional.

David Ciccarelli, CEO, says, "We're thrilled to announce the launch of Voices.com, the industry standard for searching, auditioning, and hiring voice talents. The support that our customers have shown over the past several years has been phenomenal and continues to inspire us as we strive to make Voices.com the ultimate destination for the voice industry."
