Bob North professional voice talent has renewed his relationship with Voices.com, the voice marketplace.

PR9.NET September 07, 2006 - Toronto, Canada – From the age of 13, Bob North knew that he was destined to follow his father's advice: to do what he loves and to get paid for it. Bob's gift for gab led him to Ohio State University where he majored in Broadcasting. As a freshman, he started his broadcast career working at a CBS affiliate (Channel 10) in Columbus, OH. During these formative years, Bob joined the crews of WBNS TV and WOSU TV, respectively. By the time Bob was 23, he was already a veteran of television and had his feet firmly planted in radio.

Bob North's career in radio spanned over a decade, giving him an array of opportunities including positions as an on-air personality, program director, production director, music director, and sales representative. Alongside his bustling radio career, Bob also enjoyed working as a freelance voice talent. During his present career as a freelance talent, he has taught voice over as well as on camera seminars, specializing in the use of the "ear prompter".

Bob North recently launched the website <http://RepublicanVoiceOvers.com> with voice-over colleague Pam Conley to attract additional political consultants during the political seasons. It's been said that Bob is "the guy national political consultants trust to get their candidates into office and to get their issues passed coast to coast."

Bob and Pam have been working together for over 20 years in while maintaining their individual ventures. Last year, the duo won a Gold Pollie award with Wilson Grand (out of Alexandria VA) for a "Twilight Zone" parody called "The Truth" a spot voiced for a Nevada client whose project won the award.

Voices.com Marketing Director, Stephanie Ciccarelli, says, "Bob North's voice is one of the most trusted in the US. His straightforward, no nonsense style coupled with savvy business skills is the perfect combination for any client seeking a reputable and honest voice-over."

Bob North's voice-over experience and charismatic personality makes working with him more than just business as usual. Bob North is talented, credible and professional. Each of his clients is given priority service and voice-overs that sell, whether they are concepts, commercials, or a vote for office.
