An online industrial supply marketplace introduces its new directory of computers and software suppliers. The directory is designed to help companies locate the most compatible computer systems and software to meet their needs.

PR9.NET September 08, 2006 - Boston, MA - IndustrialLeaders.com, an international industrial buying guide and marketplace for manufacturers, engineers and other technical buyers, announced today the launch of its new industrial computers and software directory.

The directory includes a wide range of industrial computers, hardware and accessories as well as lean manufacturing and distribution software offered by suppliers in over 54 countries, primarily Canada, United States, United Kingdom, Australia, Germany, Italy, India and China.

The types of industrial computers and accessories offered in the directory include computers suitable for harsh environments, barcode readers and systems, inventory control and warehouse pc's, data collection equipment, portable industrial computers, laptops, enclosures, flat computer panels, mount racks, cabinets, process control systems, cables and other power supplies, notebooks and other industrial computers for robotic and automated applications.

The different software available in the directory includes, but is not limited to software for inventory control and warehousing, ERP, shipping, supply chain management, lot and serial control, facilities management, alarm and building security software, MRP and job scheduling, distribution, human resources, engineer-to-order and many other types of software.

The directory can be accessed at, <http://www.IndustrialLeaders.com/listings/computers.html>

The company plans to add additional features to the directory by the end of the year that will allow users to explore computer catalogs, download free trial software, request quotes directly from manufacturers and compare product prices and specifications among suppliers.

"The directory is an effective tool to buy smart and save more without the usual hassles that's often associated with buying industrial computers or lean manufacturing software," says Conrad Bailey, business director of IndustrialLeaders.com.

He added, "We may not have the largest computer and software directory online, but that has never been and will never be our goal. We prefer to focus on quality rather than quantity because performance is really the buyer's best value.
