Looking for a voice and don't know where to turn? Read this article for a how-to on finding voice-overs on the Internet.

PR9.NET September 10, 2006 - Toronto, Canada - Turning to the Internet to find answers has become one of the most popular means of successfully gathering information and discovering online services that can benefit you.

Usually, your quest will start with a search engine. After typing in a description of what you are seeking, the search engine will produce a number of results. Tens of millions of people turn to the Internet each day to find answers to their questions, and that being said, millions search for better ways to do business online.

If you are reading this press release, you are likely searching for voice-overs online. That's perfect, because we specialize in the very service of providing professional voice-over talents from all around the world at Voices.com, the voice marketplace.

Years ago, people seeking voice-overs had a long, expensive road before them when it came to finding a voice for their project. Usually the individual would start by calling an advertising agency, that ad agency would then contact their preferred talent agency, the talent agency would then hold a casting call, employ the aid of a casting director, a professional recording studio, and finally would result in the recruiting of a voice-over talent, the voice talent would travel to the recording studio, and from there, the recording process would begin.

That's a lot of legwork, takes too long, and costs too much, don't you agree?

For many companies, particularly small businesses and mid-sized businesses, budgets are limited making it very expensive to work with multiple organizations to get one job done.

The solution that many are discovering today is simple: Go direct to the source to get the job done, quickly, professionally, and cost-effectively.

Finding voice-overs online is now a vital part of how business is done today. Searching online greatly streamlines the process of hiring a voice, enabling you to find what you are looking for within a few clicks and at no additional cost to you.

Searching online is one thing, but how do you know which search result is most relevant to your needs?

With there being so many websites out there, you could end up spending hours surfing through each website in the search results.

Wouldn't it be great if there was a service that hosts everyone who records voice-overs?

Voices.com has consolidated the largest database of freelance voice-over talents and voice professionals. With over 7,000 talent capable of performing voice-overs, the perfect voice is just waiting to be found, listened to and hired.

Another benefit is that finding Voices.com in the search engines is one search term away.

Voices.com ranks #1 in Google, Yahoo!, MSN, and a number of other search engines for voice-over keywords such as voice-overs, voice talents, voice-over jobs, and more. You'll be able to find voice-overs at Voices.com with ease and confidence.

Once you are at Voices.com, you will be able to search for talent using our voice talent search engine, by listening to MP3 demos in the Featured Talent Categories, or by posting a voice-over job for voice talents to apply for at Voices.com.

Posting a job is the most popular option for those who want to collect a variety of voice samples, proposals, and price quotes.

Contacting voice-over talent for work is a straightforward activity. There are links to contact talents directly via email or even by phone if the talent has provided their telephone number.

Finding voice-overs online has never been easier, more convenient and affordable. When you go straight to the source, you save more than a few clicks... you're saving time, resources, money, and energy not to mention the added perk of being able to select the perfect voice to record your voice-overs.
