WikiWebGuide LLC launches the new online music community through WikiMusicGuide at <http://wikimusicguide.com/>. The site provides free information on the great artists and bands of every genre contributed by the online music community. It allows users and site visitors to freely edit and contribute factual information about their favorite artists and their works.

PR9.NET October 02, 2006 - NORWALK, CT - WikiWebGuide LLC built a comprehensive Wiki of mainstream and independent musical artists and their works. The website can be found at <http://www.wikimusicguide.com/>. The online community gives pages regular updates designed to promote artists and musicians all over the world.

WikiMusicGuide (WMG) features artists, bands, songs, albums and a compilation of newsworthy events in the music world. Any music fan and site visitor may be the featured user. Visitors and regulars may edit the artists' pages to update or share factual information, give their own reviews and ratings on albums and tracks. Participation of WMG visitors is welcomed and encouraged through the Forum, Talk Pages and joining Working Groups. A NumberOneFan will be chosen by WMG for the most active editors for their favorite musical artist's or band's page. Use of the site is free; users need only to sign up.

The site gives more than just definitions and encyclopedic information, but trivia, current ratings and reviews as well. A creative and upbeat flow with the element of fun is evident in the site's content. This is a one stop music resource where music fans will be filled in on the latest buzz on their favorite artists. Independent artists will have access to their pages and keep their fans updated on their current works and upcoming tours. Every visit of the WMG site is a definite learning, participating and improving experience for the user.
