Most motorists are resigned to the inevitability of punctures. But contrary to popular belief, they can be prevented.

PR9.NET September 28, 2006 - Brighton, UK - Ultraseal Tyre sealant originated in the US 37 years ago. It changes any pneumatic tyre into a closed air chamber capable of sealing punctures as they happen.

US scientists were so impressed they used the sealant in trials of the Moon buggy.

The sealant, injected into a tyre through the valve core, also optimises tyre pressure, adds life to tyres, reduces rolling resistance, boosts fuel efficiency and repairs punctures permanently as they happen.

2 girls have recently completed a 10,000 mile journey, from Bangkok to Brighton in a bright pink Tuk-Tuk to raise money and awareness for a mental health charity called Mind. One of the girls, Ants, recently said "Ultraseal was totally amazing on the trip. No one can ever believe we didn't get any punctures - it should be obligatory for all road users!"

A new, local Ultraseal distribution centre has now begun trading in Brighton, East Sussex increasing public awareness of their product, selling direct to the public with their mobile installation service and also selling to vehicle garages to setup installation centres.

"We aim to provide an inexpensive way of repairing punctures before they happen," said Stuart Raynor, owner of Ultraseal Brighton. "By increasing tyre life up to 40% and improving fuel efficiency, Ultraseal pays for itself from the motorists cost savings."
