Kineda Reaches Milestone Post Count

PR9.NET October 14, 2006 - San Francisco, CA – Kineda, the popular entertainment news blog, has just passed the 1000 post mark, The web site has a loyal reader base of more than 10,000 readers who visit the blog daily.

Kineda was founded in 1997 and has since grown to be one of the leading entertainment, life style, and pop culture blogs on the Internet. Over the past eight and a half years, the web site has covered all of the latest celebrity news and rumors, as well as automotive news, fashion news, new music, strange news features, and much more. The blog also has an active community who constantly comments on and discusses all posts.

Most recently, the web site has added a new vodcast category which features videos hosted by Tami Ng, the web site's video hostess. The videos are usually posted about once a month and most are under 5 minutes. The vodcast feature was started in August of this year and there are currently three videos, including one from the car show at AT&T Park in San Francisco.

"The web site started as a place for me to share my thoughts on the Internet," said web site founder Terry Ng. "I am pleasantly surprised at how its grown over the past few years and would like to thank all of your users and readers who keep Kineda growing."
