VoiceOverTimes.com, a discussion forum for aspiring and career voice talent, has just recruited professional talent to moderate their bulletin board.

PR9.NET October 29, 2006 - Los Angeles, CA - VoiceOverTimes (<http://www.voiceovertimes.com>), a division of popular voice marketplace, Voices.com, recently accepted submissions from a variety of professional voice talent desiring to act as moderators at the company's community discussion forum online. The VoiceOverTimes forum is home to over 460 members consisting of either professional voice talent or those seeking to start a voice-over career.

The new moderators, all experienced professionals in the voice field, applied through the Voices.com VOX Daily blog, eager to share their knowledge and unique insight with others breaking into the industry. The VoiceOverTimes moderators include pro voice talents David Houston, Pete Egeler, Bob Bair, and Terry White.

Voices.com CEO, David Ciccarelli says, "The VoiceOverTimes discussion forum comprises of a vibrant community of professional voice talent. The addition of professional talent as moderators is a positive move for the entire community."
