From small paddock shelters to large horse boarding facilities, AmeriStall Horse Barns has something for every horse owner.

PR9.NET November 06, 2006 - Sanger, TX.- Gary Thomas, the owner of AmeriStall Horse Barns, the horse barn division of AmeriSteel Structures, has been in the steel-frame construction industry for decades. "We are proud to be the builder of equestrian facilities for all horsemen. As horse enthusiasts, we genuinely understand our customers' needs - high quality equestrian facilities with a reasonable price tag that look good and last," he says.

"At AmeriStall, we manufacture our structures, stalls, and options ourselves," states Thomas, "We're not brokers or marketers." Each component is carefully crafted to AmeriStall's strict, high standards at their facility in Sanger, Texas - in the heart of Texas horse country. They sell factory direct, allowing their customers to get more barn for the money.

Whether you want to outfit an entire equestrian subdivision, build a new boarding facility, get a raised center aisle barn for the backyard, or erect a simple paddock shelter or two for shelter or storage on your property, AmeriStall is happy to meet your needs. "We also offer clear span metal buildings to accommodate arenas, or garage and storage needs," adds Gary.

AmeriStall ships their barns all over the United States. They don't sell weld-up barn kits that require you to cut raw materials out in the field and piece things together as you go. Instead, their time-tested, engineer-approved designs come in pre-cut, ready-to-assemble kits that feature easy screw-together construction. They even include all the building hardware with your horse barn kit.

Before the barn is delivered, they provide a complete concrete layout plan for your crew to go by so the site is prepared for your new structure. Upon delivery, you will receive detailed erection/structural drawings and instructions so you can feel confident about erecting your barn. And, of course, AmeriStall's excellent customer service continues throughout the building process and long after your barn is successfully finished.

With so many benefits to owning an AmeriStall equestrian facility, it's no wonder that they are the builder of choice for horse owners throughout the country.
