Requested by popular demand, Voices.com has implemented three new categories for businesses and organizations looking for talent to search for movie trailer voices, podcasting voices, and narrators for documentaries.

PR9.NET November 10, 2006 - Toronto, Canada – Within the last 24 hours, Voices.com has added three new categories for those interested in hiring voices to search through, including the exciting movie trailers category, innovative podcast imaging and podcast voices category, and prestigious narration and documentary voice over categories, all of which are accessible on the Voices.com home page, featuring both male and female voice actors.

Podcasts and Podcasting Voices was a highly requested category addition. Providing companies and organizations with a category to feature specific podcast host and podcast imaging voice demos is the ticket to getting ahead in the untapped market of corporate podcasting, ripe with opportunities and branding success when produced with the help of professional, polished voices. Listening to the podcasting demos of trained voice actors will not only reveal the quality of talent but also inspire podcasters as they discover what their podcast could sound like with a professional voice actor providing the imaging and promos for their podcasts.

The Movie Trailer category is dedicated to voice overs recorded to promote movies, whether newly released in the box office or DVD releases. Often some of the most entertaining and intriguing demos, this is sure to be a hit for clients visiting the Voices.com website who are looking for a voice to introduce or set the tone for a new cinematic release. Many people look for certain "movie trailer" voices, and to be assured, they will find those voice types in ready supply at Voices.com ranging from the ominous to the cutesy.

Last but certainly not least is one of the most coveted and respected recording niches, the narration and documentary style. Narrated gems featured include MP3 samples of human-interest stories, historical, medical and scientific documentaries. Quite a number of these talented voice actors have provided services for broadcast channels such as the Discovery Channel, The History Channel, A&E, TLC, high profile news outlets, and more.

Voices.com CEO, David Ciccarelli says, "Adding these niche-specific categories is an excellent opportunity for those searching for voices regarding these applications to quickly and easily find exactly what they are looking for at Voices.com."

Voices.com is home to over 8,000 voice talents and has served over 37,000 clients worldwide. To discover the Featured Talent Categories, visit the Voices.com website:
