Voices.com represents top tier voice actors in the animation and video game sectors, providing game developers and creative professionals with the best voices for their characters.

PR9.NET November 14, 2006 - Toronto, Canada – Since the advent of the Internet, finding voices for character voice acting has become easier and faster than ever imagined. In just one click at a search engine with keywords such as "voice actor" or "voice talent", people can find the perfect voice to breathe life into their characters for video games, computer games, and animated projects.

Voices.com is one such place that traffic looking for voice actors is directed, and is home to over 8,000 voice actors, the likes of whom have recorded for blockbuster video games releases created for video game consoles including Microsoft's Xbox, Sega, Nintendo, and Sony's Playstation.

Talents found at Voices.com can perform a wide range of voice acting roles. Many talents are so versatile that they can perform multiple roles in a video game, saving their clients time and money when producing the voiceovers. Not only are the voices available and consolidated at one convenient web location, they are also featured in their own Video Game Voice Acting Category.

Voices.com CEO, David Ciccarelli says, "Video game voice acting is one fastest growing sectors within the voice industry. In order to serve game developers and production managers better, we organized the most qualified talent at our website, facilitating easy B2B connections."

Voice actors at Voices.com have auditioned for and worked with the highest echelon of game developers. These same voice actors are available to companies everywhere, ready for hire online at Voices.com.
