Intellichen announces the launch of LINKaTAG.com, which offers webmasters a unique link tag directory link for their sites.

PR9.NET November 24, 2006 - Los Angeles, CA - Intellichen has announced that November 27, 2006 will be the official launch date of a tag linking website www.linkatag.com. After months of development, LinkaTag is set to go live. The new, revolutionary, tagging web site allows website owners to select a word and have that word link to their web site or blog.

Website owners simply enter the word that they want to link to their site and if it is not already taken, they can select various optional upgrades from font size changes to color changes and text effects such as bold, underlined, overlined, italicized, or crossed through. The cost for a link is per letter plus slight additional fees if upgrades are selected. As the web site grows, prices will be adjusted accordingly.

Once all the tag specifications have been made, the link can be categorized in one of over a dozen different categories and then purchased securely via PayPal. Users can view the tags in text format or using the unique "visual mode" at www.linkatag.com/visual/ where each circle represents a tag.

One of the unique features of LinkaTag is the page preview feature. It allows users to get an image preview of the tag they are going to visit when they hover their mouse over it and can hence, get a quick "snapshot" of the page before visiting it.

"We are very proud to introduce LinkaTag to the general public," said webmaster Ken Taylor. "We have been working on the web site for a few months now and are very happy with the initial response the site has gotten."

You can visit LinkaTag and purchase your own tag at www.linkatag.com
