A new way to learn a Language. Flexible semi private lessons in multiple locations in London. The Italian class offers onlice replacement lessons via videoconference for those student who miss a class.

PR9.NET December 14, 2006 - London - Great Britain. The Italian class offers Italian language lessons for everyone in London. The company provides private and semi private Italian language lessons in various locations in London.

The Italian class supplies languages lessons to businesses interested in improving their presence in Italy. Also we provide lessons to students who would like to learn the language for personal matters such as: holidays, improve their employability, buying a property in Italy or families with an Italian heritage.

The market for language lessons is expected to expand due to further internationalisation of our economies, more affordable travel abroad and changing life styles.

We also plan to expand to other languages and teaching on the internet via videoconference and audio podcast.

The company is owned and run by Gabriele Monti. He has a Ba(hon) in modern languages and international studies from a major London university. He spent 3 years teaching Italian in Japan in the Nova Multimedia centre in Osaka. Here, Gabriele taught the Italian language via a state of the art multimedia system which allows students to study through a videoconference system from their homes.

The Italian class key product is flexible semi private tuition. Lessons are flexible because we offer a replacement if the student miss a session. This is done via a videoconference facility on the internet.

Furthermore semi private lessons are set in a small group of 3 of 4 students. The lessons are cheaper than private lessons but the student still has plenty of opportunity to speak and practice the new language structures. Traditionally language schools offer lessons in large group where there is little opportunity to actively practice.
