EMANIO, Inc. expands its development facilities in order to facilitate development of radical new EDI and mapping software for mid-sized companies.

PR9.NET December 19, 2006 - Berkeley, California -- EMANIO, Inc - a leading provider of Mapping, Data Integration (DI) and Electronic Data Interchange (EDI) applications today announced the opening of a new development center in India. The new development center will provide the necessary resources for EMANIO to expand its professional services group and increase the number of developers available to the new development effort that will see EMANIO deliver a number of significant new products in the next 18 to 24 months.

EMANIO's CEO KG Charles-Harris stated that "having access to the resources necessary to provide fast turn-around on professional services engagements will be critical to helping us achieve our goals for the near term." EMANIO provides its full line of software using a "total solution" approach that provides a single quote for both the software and the services needed to complete an implementation. Mr. Charles-Harris also commented on the benefits to EMANIO's product development plans by stating, "our ability to deliver on a very aggressive roadmap has now been significantly enhanced. Our product development plans are very exciting and will see a number of exciting and industry leading products in the next two years. Having access to experienced and professional staff in India will help us achieve that roadmap in record time."

EMANIO customers will reap the rewards to the new development facilities through a completely transparent operation. EMANIO is keeping professional services leadership and project management in the US to ensure that the needs of its North-American customer base are met.
