Tryana Productions, a bilingual English and Spanish recording studio, gets the job done with love and care.

PR9.NET January 12, 2007 - Toronto, Canada – Tryana Productions, a bilingual English and Spanish recording studio based in Glendale, California, rang in the New Year by launching their business website, (<http://www.tryanaproductions.com>), that helps people who need bilingual language services, providing translation and voiceovers for a variety of applications in both English and in Spanish.

Tryana Productions accommodates the individual needs of each client, ensuring dialect subtleties within Spanish-speaking countries and regions are preserved in voiceover recordings. This means that Tryana Productions can serve European as well as Central American, South American, and North American nations by offering the dialect required for their specific region.

The market for Hispanic voiceovers in the United States has also ballooned, positioning Tryana Productions as a timely resource for the ever-increasing need for bilingual voiceovers produced in the United States of America, a nation whose Hispanic population rose 58% during the decade to 35.3 million (statistic from USA Today article, 2002).

Tryana Productions founder, Aldo Argana says, "The purpose of Tryana Productions is to serve others through the provision of our creative production services, including voiceovers in Spanish and English."

Tryana Productions places a strong emphasis on quality and customer service. As a family owned business, Tryana Productions is prepared to go to any lengths to get the job done for their clients, even deliver voiceovers via ISDN, a delivery method that transmits live or completed recordings over telephones lines.
