Newly released version of Comodo Firewall Pro 2.4 includes multi-language support making security and protection more accessible to non-English speaking users.

PR9.NET January 25, 2007 - Jersey City, NJ - Comodo, a leading provider of Identity and Trust Assurance Management solutions, today announced the release of the newest version of its award winning Personal Firewall, Comodo Firewall Pro. Version 2.4 provides enhanced multiple language support. Currently available languages include Chinese (both traditional and simplified), Dutch, French, Greek, Hungarian, Portuguese (both continental and Brazilian), Russian, Spanish, Swedish and Turkish. The new release includes a host of other improvements and fixes, including automatic license activation. Full details can be found at the Comodo website, www.personalfirewall.comodo.com

Comodo Firewall Pro 2.4 is a highly rated firewall solution designed for home users and is free from all subscription or license fees. It features a friendly graphical user interface, highly visual traffic monitoring tools and wizard-based configuration of trusted zones - ensuring that users will not have to deal with complex configuration issues after installation.

The largest beneficiaries of the new multi-language capabilities are expected to be Russian and Chinese users - languages that cannot be accurately displayed using native, non-ASCII characters. European languages such as French and Spanish also use native, non-ASCII characters but, because they use the same Roman alphabet as English, their words have always been readable by systems that only support ASCII. For instance, French words such as café are still readable if the accents (^) are omitted.

"In order to establish trust on the internet, you have to be able to communicate trust" said Melih Abdulhayoglu, President and CEO of Comodo, "The addition of multi-language support extends the protection afforded by our firewall to a truly global audience."

Comodo Firewall is compatible with Windows XP and 2000 operating systems and can be downloaded along with a free license at www.personalfirewall.comodo.com
