VM-Productions new movie site covers all aspects of film making, and is a great resource for movie fans. They also get a chance to participate in VM-Productions upcoming projects.

PR9.NET July 10, 2007 - Santa Monica, California. VM-Productions is pleased to announce the launch of its new, completely re-designed website. Visitors will get a chance to participate in VM Productions' movies as members of the cast or crew. They'll also learn about VM-Productions' critically acclaimed movie, "Shades of Day," which has been selected by Rutgers University to be part of its cinema studies curriculum, along with a number of classic films by Bertolucci, Scorsese, Bresson, Visconti, Shradler and Kurosawa.

"There are a lot of reasons for visiting our new site, www.shadesofday.com," says Vitaly Sumin, director, writer and producer for VM-Productions. "Visitors can get to know more about our movie, "Shades of Day"—including cast, crew, and critical opinions—as well as our upcoming projects. In addition, they may choose to join our free fan club, which could make them eligible for a part in one of our upcoming movies (cast or crew). And for the visitor who wishes to know us even better and understand where we are coming from artistically, we have created an exciting new section—"Recommended Books and Films." (<http://www.shadesofday.com/VMP/recommended.htm>.)

The website is also a great resource for filmmakers and aspiring filmmakers. "We have over 900 links to web-sites related to every aspect of indie filmmaking, including acting, casting, screenwriting, art direction," says Sumin. "As of this writing, in Google's category of Film and Video Data bases, we are ranked on the 11th place out of 48,400,000 websites. In the acting and casting category we are ranked in 8th place out of 4,830,000 websites and in the entertainment directories we're ranked number one out of 48,500,000." Sumin hopes that visitors will enjoy visiting VM Productions' website. "And who knows," he concludes, "it might be the beginning of a beautiful friendship."

About VM-Productions

VM-Productions is developing and producing quality films based on original stories and masterpieces of the world literature dealing with a variety of contemporary issues often neglected by mainstream cinema (both by the studios and the 'independents'.) VM Productions produces some of its movies under the sponsorship of the prestigious, 34 year old, non-profit organization New Playwrights Foundation (NPF) of California, focusing on the support of highly original local writers and filmmakers.
