New video web site offering extreme video web sites celebrates 1 month anniversary by surpassing the 1000 video mark.

PR9.NET February 21, 2007 - Dallas, TX – AlmostKilled.com is proud to announce that they have surpassed the 1000 video mark. The web site, which allows users to upload and view extreme videos of near death situations and other extreme circumstances, was founded over a month ago in January 2007 and has really caught on generating a large user base with over 1000 videos and 2000 members within such a short period of time.

Although extreme videos are the focus of the web site, AlmostKilled.com also offers more than 500 funny videos as well as over 1800 flash games, over 1900 funny pictures, and over 35,000 free downloadable wallpapers.

"We wanted to create a complete media web site that focused on extreme and amazing videos," said webmaster Chris Atkins. "We are also planning to launch a new promotional program that will pay users for uploading their videos. Users will be paid $5 per 10,000 views and with over 7500 visitors viewing 50,000 videos daily, our video producers can earn for the videos they produce."

The web site is updated on an hourly basis, and registering to upload videos is completely free. The web site also has a Top 100 videos section, which contains the Top 100 recent videos, as well as a section with the most viewed videos of all-time.

All videos are embeddable, so webmasters can use videos on AlmostKilled.com on their own web sites without eating up space on their server. Any visitor can also submit a video to social bookmarking web sites like Digg and Del.icio.us at the click of a button. Members can also rate and comment on videos.

"AlmostKilled is just a great stress reliever after or during work. T.Thomas, PA"

You can visit the web site and view the latest extreme videos or upload your own and get paid for doing so at <http://www.almostkilled.com/>
