Sterling's proud owner, Kevin Wilson, announces that five leaping bronze dolphins will grace the front of Sterling Management's headquarters under the Sterling Management sign atop the glass tower of Sterling's recently purchased Glendale headquarters.

PR9.NET April 20, 2007 - Glendale, California - Sterling CEO Kevin Wilson Announces Silver-Bronze Dolphins for Sterling Management's new building—13 April 2007. In another demonstration of the Sterling standard, Sterling Management CEO Kevin Wilson proudly announced that five leaping dolphins, a breeding pair and three offspring, in bronze, will grace the fountain in front of Sterling's majestic two story green glass tower.

In keeping with today's Sterling Management, Sterling's headquarters, said Sterling owner Kevin Wilson, will be an oasis where Sterling Management clients can feel free to contemplate their businesses in a tranquil environment away from the office, rather than be stuck in it. Sterling Management decided to use an eight foot tall family group of leaping bronze dolphins to symbolize the harmonious teams achievable through the implementation of Sterling's management technology and the aid of Sterling consultation to a professional practice.

At night, Sterling's playful dolphin fountain will be set off by two large standing white globe lights set into bronze frames with sconces of the same design decorating the second floor balconies. As a Sterling client passes through the marble-floored foyer of Sterling's new building, and into Sterling's two story atrium, they will enter a garden setting, complete with a koi pond and waterfall. Another example of the Sterling standard, excellence to the smallest detail.

Sterling Management is fitting out its new headquarters as the ideal environment where Sterling clients can study Sterling's proven management tech, and receive private Sterling Management consulting in a perfect environment.

The Green and White Sterling Management headquarters will feature a state-of-the-art fiber-optic communications system, natural slate decks, an elegant canopied patio, all for the enhancement of Sterling clients as they master the Sterling Management program and gain from Sterling Management consulting.
