Trial presentation services company, Coast Scanning, now includes 42-50" flat screens with every trial presentation.

PR9.NET April 26, 2007 - Orange County, California Coast Scanning, Inc., a leading company in the field of Document Imaging & Scanning announces its advanced trial presentation feature using video deposition editing and archiving. And with every trial presentation equipment package a 42-50" flat screen is included.

"By adding video deposition editing and archiving, we can now offer our clients complete trial presentations services," says Tom Almeida President of Coast Scanning, Inc. He further adds, "Included in our trial presentation support services are also large (42-50 inch) flat screen monitors to further enhance the quality of the trial lawyer's presentation to the jury. With our services, exhibits can be easily pulled up at a moment's notice; and lawyers are proud to show jurors their supporting case material."

Suitable record keeping and paper-intensive tasks are very important and challenging jobs in the legal industry. Record maintenance, accurate record fetching and updating, and maintaining schedules are some common problems faced by lawyers and law firms, especially trial lawyers and trial law firms. Coast Scanning has solutions for all of the above mentioned and related problems. They provide digital document scanning, proper storage in a searchable archive, as well as access and retrieval services for paper records through secure facilities. Coast Scanning can then help lawyers and law firms take the entire digital document and video deposition library to trial, by providing full-service multimedia trial presentation consulting.

"All this helps the trial lawyer present a competent, winning argument," says Almeida. "We found that no one in the industry was able to offer the full service video deposition, editing and archiving—along with digital document scanning and trial presentation consulting—the way we can."

Coast Scanning, Inc. has adapted latest technology which leads to paperless revolution with cost effective, easy to use & maintain electronic documentation. The company provides productive solutions for industries like Architectural or Engineering, Legal, Financial Services, Banking, Government, Professional Services and even Insurance Companies.
