The leading voice over marketplace, Voices.com, is now officially accepting beta testers for their Spring '07 Release.

PR9.NET April 30, 2007 - Toronto, Canada – Voices.com is in the midst of generating one of the largest innovative revolutions in the history of the online voice over marketplace and the company is now inviting members of their customer base as well as industry pundits to test the waters of the newest generation of their website, a superior web-based platform that connects buyers and sellers of voice over and audio production services.

Beta testers will have access to all of the new features prior to the official release. For many in the voice industry, the added functionality and interface enhancements will prove to be astronomically beneficial, convenient and provide long awaited solutions for a host of problems that have plagued not just the online voice over industry but all freelance marketplaces on the Internet.

Discussions already taking place on the VOX Daily Blog ( <http://blogs.voices.com/voxdaily/> ) pertaining to the changes in the works for the web service affirm the need for particular developments and praise Voices.com's insight, passion, innovation, and dedication to serving the voice over industry as a whole. The implementations identified by the Voices.com team are necessary to propel a thriving marketplace as well as a professional environment for conducting business on the web.

Voices.com CEO and co-founder, David Ciccarelli says, "Over the past year we've experienced tremendous growth, most of which we attribute to our loyal community of users. We want to open the door to them first and demonstrate firsthand how their suggestions have come to life."

Official testing commences on Tuesday May 1st, 2007.
