Naughty singles and couples in the UK can get creative with the website design tool now available on the successful adult dating site SexintheUK.

PR9.NET May 14, 2007 - Edinburgh, UK - Mobile, social networking, community, blogs. These are the elements of the new user generated content era and the popular www.sexintheuk.com is surely leading the way by uncovering a new feature for all its members, a tool which singles can use to create their own naughty website.

Online Marketing Manager of EasyDate, Sean Wood, said: "Singles can really express themselves and be creative with this new web site creation tool. They can spice their naughty profile up by showing others a bit more about themselves and personalising an entire web page."

The site displays clear instructions with visual aids to help members create their own website. Members can decide to include just a simple profile or be more adventurous by adding photos, music and even video to their own naughty web site. A wide variety of templates and background colours are also available to simplify the process whilst still allowing members to keep their website as personal as possible.

Members of www.sexintheuk.com also have a unique web site address which they can share with others. This address can be added to their myspace page or an Instant Messenger profile such as Skype or MSN just to let others know they are available.

Sex in the UK members can increase the popularity of their personal web page and blog by sharing their unique web site address. This address contains links to the member's personal naughty site and blog, which others can visit and browse at their leisure, thus multiplying the chances of finding like-minded people for all members of the site.

Additional features such as free registration, free profile, free picture uploads, postcode search, SMS chat, SMS alerts, live video chats and mobile WAP dating are also part of this naughty dating site.

SexintheUK has more than a million members and accepts registrations from singles and couples across the UK. This is the ideal site for people who are looking for no-strings attached relationships and a bit of fun.
