The Best of What Women Have to Say is available Online, All in One Place

PR9.NET May 22, 2007 - DALLAS , TEXAS - AfricanSisters Community Connection, the premier online destination for women, announces the launch of The AfricanSisters Community Connection for women to social network customized to fit the needs of the largest nich group. Women can search for and connect with each other based on shared challenges. Women across the country can now visit AfricanSisters Community Connection to create their profile for free.

AfricanSisters is the premier online destination for women—bringing together the best of what real women have to say on topics they care about most. Through quality user-generated content from thousand of women contributors and the Web's women-to-women social network, women find answers, support, and insight needed to help lead their busy lives. AfricanSisters Community Connection newly launched social network, allows women to search for and connect with other women based on similar challenges, and interests.

AfricanSisters is dedicated to inspiring women to make a difference in their lives and the lives of others. "AfricanSisters Community Connection and The Million Sisters Extravaganza Network" grants awards to organizations and operates projects in under-served communities that provide educational initiatives as well as assist women in fulfilling basic human needs and regaining dignity.

AfricanSisters is a 501(C)(3) organization supporting programs for women, children and families, educational programs, and health and human services. All donations are 100% tax deductible under U.S. law.

AfricanSisters help organizations around the world that work in support of Education, Literacy, Human Services, and Women, Children and Families. Focus is placed on programs that generate support for impoverished, at-risk, or under-served communities, as well as educational initiatives.

In contrast to social networks targeting young people, AfricanSisters Community Connection has been uniquely developed to meet the needs of busy women. The AfricanSisters Community Connection helps women find practical solutions to their everyday challenge and issue by directly connecting them with other women dealing with similar situations. AfricanSisters Community Connection will continue to rollout new feature of the network, including online "groups," which women can join based on their shared challenges and interests.
