ParentalFilter.com is the premier website for parenting advice

PR9.NET June 13, 2007 - New York, NY - ParentalFilter.com is proud to announce its successful worldwide launch. The site is described, as one visitor put it, "The premier web site in parenting helps all mothers and fathers to share tips on how to raise children."

This revolutionary new web site boasts many different features loaded with tips and advice on how to successfully raise children for the parenting community. The site features many articles written by other parents, who have experience in dealing with difficult issues such as disciplinary action towards children, setting a healthy diet for them, how to cope with pregnancy and what to expect from it, and how to expose children to the internet.

The owner and the lead developer of this innovative site said, "ParentalFilter.com is home to all things parents. Just like web sites such as WebMD.com, ParentalFilter.com offers helpful advice to any topic that has to do with children."

The most popular attribute of ParentalFilter.com is its highly popular forum, which offers advice on any subject that has to do with parenting. The forum offers advice on every topic ranging from whether spanking is moral and advice on picking a name for a child. Because of its widespread popularity, anyone can post a question on how to handle a situation and have it answered by other parents in matter of minutes. This allows ParentalFilter.com to be at the forefront in online parenting.

You can register for a free account and seek advice on parenting at ParentalFilter.com.
