ChangeDetect has been helping web users monitor changes on their favorite webpages for over 5 Years.

PR9.NET June 25, 2007 - San Francisco, Calif. - ChangeDetect is proud to announce that it recently celebrated its 5 year anniversary. Since 2002, ChangeDetect has been helping users monitor changes on their favorite web sites.

The service is free to use and allows users to bookmark certain web sites that they would like to be notified whenever a change to that site is made. "Change Alerts" are sent out by E-Mail, pager, ICQ, or a text message platform. ChangeDetect sends you a version of the webpage with new text underlined in green and deleted text crossed out in red.

"Online services to accurately detect and report web page changes have come and gone over the years. ChangeDetect, with color-coded highlighting of web page changes, is dedicated to quality service for over ten thousand subscribers," said Karen Burns, Business Development Manager.

ChangeDetect is especially useful when you want to track changes made on a website that does not provide RSS feeds. It can also monitor pages which require users to login to access. If users have any questions, they can visit ChangeDetect's extensive list of Frequently Asked Questions or post a message to the ChangeDetect Helpdesk at any time.

"May I congratulate you to this very useful innovation, change highlighting, which works like a charm for me. In many cases I see the change is irrelevant for me, from the highlight, and do not bother to visit the page at all. Keep up the good work," said one subscriber from Germany.

You can get all the program details and sign up for a free account at <http://www.changedetect.com/>.
