Research by the federal Department of Transportation continues to show that auto accidents are the leading accidental killer of Americans. As the weather gets warm and many people set off on road trips, LegalView.com would like to remind readers that comprehensive automotive safety information is always available at its auto accident information portal.

PR9.NET August 09, 2007 - DENVER, CO - Your one-stop shop for everything legal, LegalView.com, is proud to remind readers that it maintains complete and up-to-date information on automobile accidents at <http://crash.legalview.com/>. Auto accidents -- also known as car wrecks and car crashes -- are the leading killer of Americans under 35, according to 2003 research from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), and are consistently the top cause of accidental death for Americans under 65. With teens out of school, great weather for biking and motorcycling, and road-trippers heading for vacation spots, summer can be prime time for careless driving. With this in mind, LegalView.com maintains its comprehensive portal on automobile accidents, including tips on prevention, procedures, how to protect your legal rights, and how to get in touch with an auto accident lawyer at <http://crash.legalview.com/>.

The NHTSA's preliminary 2006 traffic safety facts show that auto accidents are down slightly from 2005 -- a fact that can certainly be celebrated. However, certain categories of risk are projected to go up, including the risk of drunk driving accidents. With motorcycle accidents continuing their alarming upward trend, the NHTSA has finally authorized a study updating the 1981 Hurt Report on motorcycle crash causes. And the example of New Jersey Governor Jon Corzine, who was injured earlier this year when he was involved in a high-speed crash while not wearing a seat belt, shows that seat belt compliance rates are still not as high as they should be. All these automotive safety facts and others can be found at LegalView.com's car crash lawyer portal, along with information on negotiating with insurance companies; a state-by-state breakdown of car crash liability laws; and advice on handling a crash with an uninsured motorist. Visitors can browse these original informational articles, as well as news feeds; videos; encyclopedia entries; an auto accident blog and much more. Those looking for yet more information can seek out books and Web sites recommended by LegalView.com's team of experts. And visitors seeking information about auto accident law in their state can check out LegalView.com's collection of links to local resources online.

The auto accident portal is just one of many complete collections of information offered to the public at no charge by LegalView.com. Visitors may also be interested in using LegalView.com's attorney referral service to find a [brain injury lawyer, a construction accident attorney, or a mesothelioma law firm. Alongside its attorney referral service for each of these topics, LegalView.com offers collections of original articles, news feeds, jury verdict information, blogs, news feeds and much more. And like all parts of LegalView.com, these and other portals offer visitors the chance to search for an experienced, qualified attorney in their area at no charge.
