The increasing prominence of Valencia, a Spanish city on the international map, has popularised Spanish luxury villas as a popular tourist retreat.

PR9.NET August 18, 2007 - London - The tourism scenario in Valencia, Spain's third largest city, is currently at an all-time high. The reason behind this fact is that this picturesque city has now acquired international status. It first attained spotlight for officially hosting America's Cup in April 2007 and now it is in the spotlight for organising the Formula One Grand Prix in 2008. All these events have not only brought in more tourists, but has also popularised Spanish luxury villas as the ultimate royal retreat.

The popularity of Spanish luxury villas amongst tourists is increasing. Irrespective of their high costs, more and more tourists prefer these luxurious villas to swanky hotels. People enjoy the feeling of spaciousness and natural beauty, especially coming from urban cities that are continually facing a space crunch. Luxury villas in Spain are not just beautiful buildings. In fact, some of them are a part of the rich historical and architectural heritage of this beautiful country.
