AXIGEN closes its first partnership agreement in Australia with the Cleartext company.

PR9.NET October 09, 2007 - Bucharest, Romania – AXIGEN, the professional mail server vendor, announced today the closure of its first partnership agreement in Australia with the Cleartext company (<http://www.cleartext.com.au>).

The Australia based company Cleartext offers a carefully selected suite of messaging and collaboration solutions, from IM servers and appliances to security and policy management solutions. The company's goal is to enable companies of all sizes to maximize the integrity, confidentiality and availability of their messaging systems.

"We selected the AXIGEN mail server after a process of evaluating several mail server solutions. Our selection criteria was based on the requirement to have a secure, standards based and scalable mail platform for our new ClearEmail managed service platform and to recommend to our clients in Australia. AXIGEN's high-end technology doubled by outstanding and around the clock support services convinced us their messaging solutions were our best choice," said David Banes, Cleartext Director.

"The new partnership with Cleartext is AXIGEN's first step on the Australian market. We trust this valuable business relationship will help us adapt our innovative messaging solutions to all specific requirements of companies operating in Australia. We are also determined to expand our distribution network on this new market, as well as our worldwide presence. In the first 9 months of 2007 alone, our partner network has been increased by 90 percent," concluded Oana Bornaz, AXIGEN CEO.

AXIGEN Mail Server is THE mail server for Linux professionals, offering unmatched manageability and control over even the smallest details of heavy email traffic, so as to make the best of all hardware and connectivity resources.

Now at version 4.0.2, AXIGEN runs on several Linux and BSD distributions, on Solaris and PowerPC and signed technology partnerships with Sun Microsystems, RedHat, IBM and Avira. The AXIGEN Mail Server has recently won the ServerWatch 2007 Product Excellence Award for the Communications Server category, after having competed with four other messaging solutions – Zimbra, CommuniGate, Merak and Lotus.
