Online wireless accessory retailer to provide first desktop charging cradles for AT&T's newest PDA phone, AT&T Tilt 8925.

PR9.NET October 12, 2007 - Los Angeles, Calif. – TalkieTech.com announced on Friday that they will be one of the first cell phone accessory retailers in the US to offer the AT&T Tilt 8925 Desktop Cradles. These highly anticipated cradles will go on sale on October 23, 2007 and are priced at $23.95 for the single cradle and $29.95 for the 2nd battery cradle.

"This is the largest shipment of desktop cradles we've ever had and we're excited about being the first to offer a desktop charging cradle for the AT&T Tilt phone", said Alex K., Sr. Marketing Manager of Talkie Tech. The AT&T Tilt, which features a 3 megapixel camera, stereo Bluetooth, Windows Mobile 6 and integrated GPS receiver, is the newest addition to AT&T's PDA phone line up. HTC's reputation for making exceptional PDA cell phones, a delayed launch date and AT&T's concealment about offering the phone has generated a great demand for this phone.

The AT&T Tilt 8925 Desktop Cradle will come in two different models. One model will include a 2nd battery charging slot, allowing users to charge both the phone and an additional battery, while the other model will not have the additional battery slot. "Desktop cradles have been very popular on our site, especially with business professional, who like to keep one in their office for convenience," said Alex K.
