Popular film podcast Subject:CINEMA is featuring five greats of horror and suspense films on their month-long Halloween series "Masters Of The Macabre".

PR9.NET October 18, 2007 - Boston, MA - Given the nature of the holiday, and the number of horror films that have been made over the years, Halloween presents many good topics for discussion. And for the second year in a row, Popcorn N Roses' popular weekly podcast, Subject:CINEMA, is focusing on the holiday with a special series of shows with the holiday in mind.

Each week throughout the month, Subject:CINEMA will feature profiles of five top horror film names in their special October series, "Masters Of The Macabre".

"Our 'Halloween Scenes' series was so well received last year, that this year, we decided to focus on the legends of horror", says Subject:CINEMA co-host and producer TC Kirkham. "They are the names that are associated with horror and suspense, and this is the perfect time of year for it, and a great series for new listeners to find out what Subject:CINEMA is all about."

As part of the series, the podcast will feature profiles of Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Christopher Lee, Vincent Price and producer/director William Castle.

Recently selected by podcasting guru Adam Curry as one of the best movie podcasts on the net, and featured on a recent edition of Curry's popular Podfinder podcast, Subject:CINEMA has been presenting funny and fun discussions on a variety of movie subjects for nearly 18 months, in addition to film news, reviews of mainstream and independent films, and coverage of film festivals in a fast paced two-hour weekly podcast.

A complete schedule of the "Masters Of The Macabre" series and its weekly topics can be found at <http://subjectcinema.com> or on the parent site at <http://popcornroses.com>
