Outta Inc has announced that it plans to support the NJROTC program in Corpus Christi by purchasing empty ink cartridges from CCAD.

PR9.NET October 19, 2007 - Corpus Christi, TX - Outta Inc, famous for asking consumers if they Need Printer Ink has announced a collaboration with Corpus Christi Army Depot (CCAD) to help support the NJROTC program at Flour Bluff Senior High School.

Danielle Aquilina, owner, stated, "The future of our youth depends on them being able to accomplish the goals they set out to achieve. We believe the local businesses in Corpus Christi and abroad should support programs like NJROTC. This is one way we can secure the future."

The NJROTC gives high school age boys and girls the ability to tie in to a wonderful program that will benefit them for years to come. Future Leaders are being established thanks to organizations like Outta Inc.
