BookPerHead.com, one of the leading PPH (Price Per Head) Shops in sports and entertainment, releases the first Sports Betting Forum in the Pay Per Head Sportsbook industry for fans, sports betting agents and bettors.

PR9.NET October 30, 2007 - Costa Rica – One of the favorite activities for rabid sports fans has been the use of Sports Forums, interactive websites where they can post and debate ideas, predictions and all kinds of events related to the sports world.

For the first time since the creation of the Pay Per Head trend for online sports entertainment, a Sports Forum has been created for fans, bettors and Price Per Head agents by the company BookPerHead.com. "The difference with the rest of sports forums available is that it is not only about sports or only about betting", says Julie Gates, PR representative from BookPerHead.com. "It's a combination of possibilities with an innovative design so all people interested in sports can find a place to post their opinions and debate with other fans".

According to the Price Per Head Bookmaking company, this forum (which has been released under the name of The Bookie Corner) will be open for a wide range of audience including Pay Per Head agents or sports betting fans interested in the latest sports events and looking to interact with other people with similar interests.

This Pay Per Head Sportsbook releases The Bookie Corner with different categories, including a section for News with the latest in the sports world and insights into the online sports betting industry, forum areas divided by sports like NFL Football, Baseball, Hockey, Tennis and NBA Basketball, among others. There will also be additional categories for webmasters interested in promoting their sports betting offers and a space for other non-related topics that is geared towards a more social purpose among the Bookie Corner PPH Forum community.

The Pay Per Head Sports Forum is currently active and open for registration at <http://www.bookperhead.com/forum/index.php> .
